Can a conspiracy be uncovered before the Death Count rises?

Semi-finalist, Publisher's Weekly BookLife Fiction Prize, 2021

Blurb:

Forensic accountant Kat Munro fights corporate fraud during the day and kickboxes her demons at night while trying to ignore the nightmares that have plagued her since a car accident changed her life forever.

DS Adam Jackson is haunted by the mysterious disappearance of a friend two years ago.

When the partner of a successful London Investment fund dies in suspicious circumstances, Kat joins forces with Adam to investigate the firm. As they gather evidence of a crime with implications beyond the City, they find that events in their pasts are on a collision course; one which will ultimately put them both in serious danger.

Trade Note: Death Count is a fast-paced financial crime thriller and is perfect for fans of Robert Galbraith, LJ Ross, John Grisham and Lisa Jewell.

Review Quotes:

"Here we have an exciting and well thought out plot with a unique protagonist that not only holds the reader's interest throughout but leaves them wanting more...Dialogue, action, description are all perfectly balanced, and the pace of the plot keeps the story moving at a brisk pace...Readers looking for an exciting and satisfying new thriller need not look any further. SL Beaumont's Death Count will not disappoint. 10/10." Publisher's Weekly BookLife Fiction Prize
